

Here are some further ideas for language scenarios:

Units 1 and 2

A new student arrives in school. He or she meets other students at different times of the day. You greet each other and give personal information.

Or two students could meet and introduce themselves to each other and then, when a third student comes, the first two could introduce each other to the third student.

Units 2, 3, and 8

All the members of a family are standing frozen on the spot, pretending to be in a photograph. One by one, come to life and introduce yourselves, give some personal information, and “step back” into the photograph. You could introduce other family members, saying what the person likes to do while the person being introduced acts out their part.

Unit 9

Some students are sitting in a café and are getting ready to order breakfast. You can talk about what you had for breakfast the day before and what you like or dislike on the menu.

Units 2, 3, and 5

Some students are being auditioned for a role in a short film. You have to give personal information at your audition. This could include saying who your parents are, giving other personal information, and revealing something about your activities and preferences.

Units 5 and 7

Some students are talking as they watch a game being played (in a sport such as basketball, where the scores are constantly increasing). You discover that one of the student’s bags is missing. You need to find it.
